

A one-day practical workshop for building confidence in working with young people of diverse genders, sexes and sexualities, wherever they are, presented by Twenty10.

- Is your school or service supportive and inclusive for young people questioning their sexuality or gender?
- How can you provide the most beneficial support for them and their families?
- How can you handle homophobic or transphobic language, behaviour or bullying?

For nearly a decade, Twenty10 has provided training and support to service providers across New South Wales in better practice for working with same-sex attracted or gender diverse young people (including those who identify as lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, intersex or queer).

At Twenty10, we offer high-standard, challenging and interactive adult-learning workshops, through in-service and open-access formats. Our experienced and highly-skilled staff can tailor the training to suit the specific needs of your organisation, school, or service.

Here and Now* is a one-day practical workshop that supports anyone who works with young people, including youth and health workers, teachers, counsellors, admin staff, and volunteers to:

- Explain the differences between sex, gender and sexuality.
- Identify common issues for young people of diverse genders, sexes and/or sexualities and how best to support them, their families and communities.
- Recognise homophobic and transphobic behaviours and develop practical strategies to challenge them.
- Evaluate how you (and your workplace, school, service or organisation) interact with young people, and create a plan of action to increase inclusivity and cultural awareness.
- Access appropriate resources, referrals and services.

Participants become Here and Now Alumni and are offered specialised support from Twenty10 in implementing the strategies that emerge from the program.
